Memphis and Matilda at the frog pond

It was early morning and Memphis and Matilda had asked their mother if they could walk down to the frog pond near the local park and search for tadpoles. Their mother made them promise to be back before morning tea. It had been raining and the ground was soggy around the edge of the pond. Memphis looked in the water to see if there were any signs of movement. Matilda noticed some wriggling movements near the reeds and bent down. She called Memphis over and he dipped his empty tin into the muddy water. When he held the tin up to the light he could see a whole family of tadpoles swimming around.

Matilda's sport's carnival

The school bus was full the children almost seemed to be busting out the windows. Matilda was wearing her school house colour everywhere. She had red ribbons in her hair. She had a red t-shirt, red socks, red shorts and of course, red hair. Her mum had coloured her hair red with red hairspray. When the school arrived at the sport's field the equipment was already set up. Matilda was head of the Wombats, which was red of course. As the day progressed the children in the Wombats cheered each other on, hoping to receive the most points and win the house trophy. The final event was a relay race. Matilda's team won by just one second but it was enough to beat the other three houses overall.

Memphis & Dad collect wood

The morning was foggy, the windows were fogging up and droplets of water made it appear that it was raining inside. Mum checked the fire was ready to go. The paper was scrunched up at the bottom of the fireplace and some twigs sat on top of them. The only things missing were some thick branches and round logs. Memphis and Dad were sent on a mission to bring back wood from the vacant building next door. Most of the logs they found were too long and Dad had to cut them into smaller pieces with his sharp saw. Memphis wanted to cut the logs but dad was worried he might cut himself. Memphis helped Dad carry in the splintery logs and soon a warm fire was raging inside.

Memphis & Matilda go to a picnic

The Moore family had been awake since the sun had risen. While mum hastily packed the esky, the kids argued about which toys they were going to take to the picnic ground. Memphis decided on the frisbee and Matilda thought the ball would be best. Dad had barely put his feet on the brakes when the children jumped out of the ute. Mum and Dad set up lunch and the kids played together. While their parents watched them play, some other little creatures had already started on lunch. A colony of ants had smelt the food and scurried onto the woollen rug. When Mum looked down she let out a piercing scream. Dad and the kids sped over and began the 'food rescue'. After an hour of chasing and flicking ants nobody had much of an appetite!

Memphis's birthday party

Memphis's eyes began to sparkle as soon as they opened. He had been waiting for this special day all year. The day seemed to pass so slow as he awaited the arrival of his first guest. One by one the children arrived dressed up as pirates with gifts wrapped in silver and gold. At three o'clock on the dot, 'Captain K' marched through the door with his sword by his side. He painted all the kids faces like pirates and they enjoyed a fun treasure hunt. Memphis unwrapped the presents and soon had a pile of gifts that almost touched the roof. All the children sang 'Happy Birthday' and with a huge puff of air the candles on the pirate ship cake were extinguished.
